

Independent auditor's report on the CO2 Statement at 17 March 2017

To the Board of Directors of Ingenco2.dk ApS, Business Registration No 32 07 50 53

As agreed with the Company's Management, we have examined Ingenco2.dk's CO2 Statement at 31 March 2017 (hereinafter referred to as the CO2 Statement) which sums up participants who have had CO2 emissions neutralised in tons by Ingenco2.dk in the period 8 May 2015 to 17 March 2017. We have furthermore examined that an equivalent number of Gold Standard CO2 allowances have been purchased from co2balance.

Management's responsibilities

The Company's Management is responsible for planning an adequate system to ensure that neutralisation of CO2 emissions in tons is performed in accordance with the Company's description in this respect. Management is also responsible for the correctness of the calculated CO2 quantity for which CO2 allowances are purchased.

Auditor's responsibilities

Our responsibility is to express a conclusion on the CO2 Statement and the neutralised CO2 emissions in tons when purchasing CO2 allowances, based on our work.

We conducted our examinations in accordance with ISAE 3000, Assurance Engagements Other than Audits or Reviews of Historical Financial Information and additional requirements under Danish audit regulation to obtain reasonable assurance about our opinion.

Deloitte Statsautoriseret Revisionspartnerselskab is subject to International Standard on Quality Control (ISQC) 1, and, accordingly, applies a comprehensive quality control system, including documented policies and procedures regarding compliance with ethical requirements, professional standards and applicable legal and regulatory requirements.

We have complied with the independence and other ethical requirements of the Code of Ethics for Professional Accountants issued by FSR - Danish Auditors (Code of Ethics for Professional Accountants), which are based on the fundamental principles of integrity, objectivity, professional competence and due care, confidentiality and professional behaviour.

We examined whether the CO2 Statement as prepared by Management complies with the Company's description of method provided in Appendix 1, and checked for existence of adequate documentation of the purchase of 9,500 tons of Gold Standard CO2 allowances.

Ingenco2.dk's list of participants who have had CO2 emissions neutralised in tons by Ingenco2.dk in the period 8 May 2015 to 17 March 2017 is evident from Appendix 2. We have checked that participants who have paid Ingenco2.dk have also had their CO2 emissions neutralised in tons. Our work is based on an assessment of the risk of material misstatements, involving reconciliation to documentation on a sample basis.

Opinion

Based on the procedures performed, in our opinion, the CO2 Statement totalling 9,500 tons of CO2 allowances, which is consistent with data thereon as reported by the participants for the period 8 May 2015 to 17 March 2017, has been compiled, in all material respects, in accordance with the calculation method specified by the Company and provided in Appendix 1. Further, in our opinion, the Company has purchased 9,500 tons of Gold Standard CO2 allowances from co2balance in the period.

Appendix 1: The Company's description of method

We calculate CO2 emissions from using the Internet as follows:

Businesses partaking in the initiative have neutralised CO2 emissions from their websites. The result is climate-friendly surfing!

CO2 emission from using a website may be calculated based on:

1. Energy consumption of the web server
2. Energy consumption from transferring data from server to users
3. Energy consumption with the users of the website (computer, screen, routers, modem, etc).

A web server is assumed to run for 24 hours a day all year long. The effect on a small, independent web server is typically 200 watt. However most websites are professionally hosted, indeed using more powerful servers, but then the same server can accommodate many sites, resulting in reduced power consumption for the individual site.

Despite this, we have decided to use 200 watt in our calculations, which provides a buffer.

On the part of the user, we use a turned-on standard PC with a 17-inch screen using 173 watt as a basis (source: www.eu-energystar.org). To this is added consumption from router and modem. In total, we anticipate 200 watt per user.

The number of monthly page views and average time spent by the user on the site are also important to the total energy consumption.

The number of monthly page views varies significantly from site to site. There is no publically available list of all websites with specifications in this area, for which reason the figures are provided by the businesses. The business registers with the initiative based on expected number of page views. No business can however precisely predict its traffic on the site for which reason it is possible to make continuous adjustments.

To be on the safe side, the businesses participate in traffic intervals, which ensures that all businesses register by a higher traffic figure than what was their actual point of departure.

For instance, a business with 30,000 page views per month participates in the interval "up to 50,000 page views".

Another significant variable is time spent per page view, which is particularly important to the visitor's power consumption. No public data on this area exists for the individual websites, and the information may be a trade secret for the business. However one of the world's leading and largest online market research companies, Nielsen Online, performs monthly statistics in the area.

According to their figures, the key indicator of time per page view is 50 seconds (source: http://www.nielsen-online.com/resources.jsp?section=pr_netv). This figure too varies greatly in practice from website to website which constitutes uncertainty to us. But as we have a great spread in the participant group, the average figure is probably close to Nielsen Online's figures. Also, the benefit from a high number of businesses participating in an initiative such as this is that where some businesses have more traffic than expected, others have less. In special situations, we make specific calculations and reserve the right to do so at any time, which is applicable to all variables in the equation.

We have decided to use 60 seconds as a variable in our calculations which provides a buffer of approx 20%.

Finally, power is consumed in cables connecting servers with users. The amount is minimal and is set at 1 watt a month per page view.

All our calculations of power consumption are based on all months counting 31 days.

This is an overestimate of 2% as many months count less than 31 days.

For websites with heavy traffic, we can make specific calculations to find a more precise figure.

From where does the power come?

The way we convert energy consumption into CO₂ emission depends on how the power used is produced. The most eco-friendly power of today emits close to no CO₂ (for instance wind power). Coal power is at the other end of the scale.

For the purpose of our calculations, we have decided that all power consumption for Internet use originates from coal power, which of course increases our need for neutralisation, but in doing so we play safe.

At the same time, it may be argued that the additional power used for the Internet may not be produced by further production of CO₂-free power as wind turbines do not produce more than the wind blows, while power plants can simply increase production by using more coal.

Many power companies do decide to use the average CO₂ emission on produced power in similar CO₂ calculations, in which they include wind power. In doing so, they often end up with 500 grams of CO₂ per 1 kWh. Our calculations use 808 grams as we use only coal power as a basis (source: Energinet.dk).
